If Outsourcing Is Not the Right Answer for Your Business... EDI Consulting with Innovate E-Commerce Could Be the Solution You Are Looking For..

Innovate E-Commerce offers an extremely beneficial EDI Consulting Service for those businesses who prefer to keep their EDI in-house. While outsourcing EDI is an excellent way to save time and money, it may not be the right fit for everyone. Some companies have already invested in a solid EDI infrastructure, and prefer to run their EDI in-house, so they can keep a close eye on its daily functionality.

However, even with a solid infrastructure, and access to new technology, companies may not have a dedicated staff. That's why Innovate E-Commerce offers EDI Consulting Services, a service that not only maintains your EDI, but also improves and supports its affects on your business.

The Problem

Investing in an infrastructure, supportive technologies and applications isn't the end of handling EDI. EDI needs to be monitored constantly in order to resolve issues before they become major problems for businesses and their clients. Maintaining a well-educated EDI staff who can constantly supervise procedures can be difficult and problematic.

Employees have several projects to handle at once, and finding time to concentrate on EDI is difficult, and may hinder the progress of other, more important projects. Plus, every time technology changes or advances, staff must be re-trained, losing more valuable time and money, which could have been invested in other tasks. Unless businesses hire a much larger staff, and thus raise costs, the EDI applications cannot be supported full time. Without full-time support, problems can occur unnoticed until they actually impact the business.

In addition, backlog EDI requests will increase, resulting in unhappy customers and increased costs. Businesses then find that they are losing clients or sales because their EDI system was not reliable, and problems were not prevented through careful monitoring and support.
